

Employment law update for the boardroom

A half-day course exploring the latest changes in employment law and what they mean for company boards

Employment law is a minefield – and not just for the HR team. Increasingly, directors and senior managers are being held to account for the decisions they take, and for their effects upon employees. Getting it wrong can cost a company dearly.

Designed for company secretaries, directors and other board and senior management colleagues, this half-day course offers a path through the minefield and examines the latest developments in employment law that need bringing to the board's attention. The course is structured and timed around the April and October implementation dates and is updated every time, so you can be sure it's always topical!

Programme

08.30	Registration & tea/coffee
09.00	Introduction to topical employment law developments
09.15	The Equality Bill An analysis of its impact on all areas of discrimination and equal pay (including gender pay audits)
10.00	Agency workers Impact of new legislation
10.45	Tea/coffee
11.00	Key case law developments A look at the most important recent cases in employment law
11.45	A round-up of topical employment issues
12.15	Questions and answers
12.30	Close