

An introduction to AIM

A one-day course offering practical guidance for companies listed or looking to list on AIM, and their advisors

In the last few years AIM (the Alternative Investment Market) has come of age, and is now regarded as a significant market for a wide range of UK and overseas companies. At the same time, however, debates have also arisen about how the market is regulated – and whether the appropriate controls are in place to encourage good governance and investor confidence.

This one-day course provides a thorough overview of how AIM works, covering topics such as the admissions process, continuing obligations and reporting, plus a guide to the key players – including nominated advisors, brokers, directors and the company secretary – corporate governance issues and effective interaction with investors.

Programme

09:15	Registration & tea/coffee
	An introduction to AIM Background and overview
	The key players Nominated advisors (Nomads): their role on admission and afterwards Brokers: raising finance Directors: duties and liabilities Company secretary: an advisory role
	The AIM Rules The admissions process Continuing obligations Keeping the market informed/disclosure and transparency
	Corporate governance for AIM companies Guidance and best practice
	Financial and narrative reporting Requirements and practicalities
	Interaction with investors Knowing your investors and understanding their expectations General meetings
17:00	Close